Dear Mr. Attorney General:

The issue presented in this letter is the following: Under existing legislation does the authority and responsibility to provide a headquarters building for the Central Intelligence Agency rest with the Director of Central Intelligence or the Administrator of General Services.

OGC

FOIAB5

We had hoped that, in this work, we would benefit from the advice and assistance of the General Services Administration with regard to ultimate authority and responsibility, but we opted very today, as we have in the past, to work out an arrangement with the General Services Administration along those lines.

Recently, however, we have obtained and studied a copy of a letter from the Administrator of General Services to the Bureau of the Budget, dated August 26, 1955, copy enclosed, which states that it is a decision in quite contrary to their position that, as a matter of law, they have the responsibility for design and construction of the building, they believe it would be better to release the General Services Administration from any further participation.

MORI/CDF

In a conference which we had on 14 October with the Administrator OGC of General Services and Mr. Pauline D. Brinkley, Deputy Director of the Bureau of the Budget, in an effort to find a practical solution to the problem, Mr. Munroe clearly reaffirmed the position stated in the FOIAB5 above-mentioned letter.

Sincerely,

SIGNED

The legal phases of this matter are dealt with in the attached opinion and memorandum of law.

We had hoped that, in this work, we would benefit from the advice and assistance of GSA while retaining ultimate authority and responsibility and we stand ready today, as we have in the past, to work out an arrangement with GSA along these lines.

Recently, however, we have obtained and studied a copy of a letter from the Administrator of GSA to the Bureau of the Budget, dated August 26, 1955, copy attached, which states ~~in effect that~~ ~~unless~~ their position that, as a matter of law, they have the responsibility for design and construction of the building, they believe it would be better to remove GSA from any further participation.

*/ That if a decision is made

In a conference which we had on 14 October with the Administrator of General Services, and Mr. Percival F. Brundage, Deputy Director of the Bureau of the Budget, in an effort to find a practical solution to the problem, Mr. Mansure clearly reaffirmed the position stated in the above mentioned letter, ~~and left no alternative but to present to you the problem of law stated above.~~
